DECLARES ST. LOUIS SMOKE IS "AWFUL."

Tenor Ferdinando Avedano Says "It Makes Me Sing Like Smoke."

Perdinando Avedano, principal tenor of the Southwell Opera Company, on whose account that organization applied for t writ of mandamus to compel the City Smoke Inspector to enforce the "smoke ordinance" because the murky atmosphere of St. Louis got into his lungs and prevented his appearing in "La Gioconda" last Monday night, explained yesterday why he adrised the company to take this action. The signor's English is doubtful, and when he becomes very much interested it is so interlarded with Italian French and Spanish as to be almost beyond understanding by an American not familiar with those languages. The services of Signor Achille Alberti, leading barytone of the company, were frequently required to interpret Signor Avedano's remarks before he conversation could continue,

"I have seen one place to beat St. Louis for smoke," sald Signor Avedano; "this is Poetsburg, Peetsburg smoke like de Seant Louis smoke. It should be no more of somethink like this. Fogs and smoke are not good for some voices. It make me sing like smoke. The first day of my arrival it was very bad. I have to blow out mouthful of moke like when I use a cigar.
